Heather Tamminga Named Executive Director for Iowa Water Well Association (IWWA)

Des Moines, November 14, 2005:

Association Management, Ltd. (AML) and the Iowa Water Well Association (IWWA) Board of Directors recently named Heather Tamminga as Executive Director of IWWA. IWWA is the premier association representing over 250 member companies of water well industries throughout in the State of Iowa.

"We are looking forward to working with Heather and all of the AML staff as IWWA communicates to Iowans the importance of groundwater and private water well systems," said IWWA President Tom Thorpe.

Tamminga is an Account Executive for AML. She has over six years of experience working with non-profit associations in the areas of association management, member services, board/committee relations, communications, marketing, media relations, meeting/convention planning, Web site maintenance and financial management. She is currently working toward achieving her Certified Association Executive (CAE) designation.

According to AML President Molly Lopez, CAE, "With Heather's association management experience, degree in journalism/mass communications, and strong leadership, organizational and communication skills, she is a great fit for IWWA."

Tamminga lives in Des Moines, Iowa, with her husband, Brett, and their son, Chance (4). She is very active in the community, and enjoys gardening, home improvement projects and spending time with family.

Since 1976, AML has provided full-service management for IWWA. Headquartered in Des Moines, Iowa, AML is a full-service association management company for international, national, state and local non-profit trade associations and professional societies.
